Art from the Heart

Hokusai lived a long time ago in Japan. He was great artist. He made thousands of pictures. However, at first people didn't think his pictures were anything special. They didn't pay him well nor did they care about his work. Some people even used his paintings as wrapping paper!

However, Hokusai did not stop trying. He wanted people to notice his talent. So he did odd things, such that no one had done before. Once he drew two flying birds on a grain of rice. The picture was so tiny that people had to use a magnifying glass to get a closer look at it! Another unique thing he did was to get a rooster to step in red ink and made it walk across the paper. Hokusai made the rooster's tracks into red leaves and created an autumn scene from it.

Besides his paintings, he did strange things in his personal life too. He changed homes ninety times and his name fifty times! The last name he took was 'Gakyo Rojin', meaning, 'the old man crazy about art'.

However, Hokusai's paintings were something constant in his life. Gradually he became famous and people came to know his as a great artist. One of the biggest honours he earned in his life was for his famous picture 'The Wave'. It shows a stormy sea with one huge wave. This big wave towers over a boat full of men.

Hokusai died as a famous artist when he was ninety.
